A HARD DOSE TO SWALLOW. The hardest dose to swallow is advice, and yet advice is what a great many of us need. The advice we wish to rive—and which we give in the kindhest spirit—is to have your life insured at once, if you have not already done so. If not in the Equitable, then in some other good company—but why not in the Equitable? There are none stronger, more progressive, more liberal to its policy holders, more reasonable, nor a better investment. Although the youngest it has outstrapped all of its competitors, and today it is the only company that issues an absolutely incont-stable p-deg.

Drop a jostal for psimphlets and other information, or stop in.

This morning Commissioners Douglass and Ross talked the matter over and Mr. Ross suggested that Secretary Tindall be directed to draft an order reorganizing the board of Commissioners, with Commissioner Douglass as president and Mr. Ross as acting president. The order was drawn and the secretary will make another journey to Rockville to get the colonel's signa-ture of approval. The division of duties will remain the same.

MR. BLAINE AND OHIO. It is Not at All Sure That the Secretary Can Go There and Speak

It may be that Secretary Blaine will go to Ohio to help Maj. McKinley into the next House of Representatives, but if that is the fact then the Secretary himself is not aware of it. The business of the State Department is not less pressing than on yesterday when the Secretary said he would almost certainly remain here and the President is just as much away now as he was at that time; another reason why the head of the State Department should stay right in his office. It can be stated most positively that if the work of the State Department will permit Mr. Blaine will make perhaps three speeches in McKinley's behalf, but the chances are that the orator of Maine will have no opportunity to talk to the Buckeye folk.

The "extra session" rumor has again been set afoot and circulated widely, despite an array of facts that ought to convince any one of its emptiness. The date for the assembling of this supposititious extra session is given as Tuesday, November 11. Now, when any President wants to call an extra session he has to give the members of Congress thirty days in which to pack up their clothes and the applications for office filed by their constituents. It is hardly probable that the President will call an extra session while he is away, yet that is what he a recount of the population of the state of must do if Congress is to assemble on the 11th proximo.

ANNIE MILLER'S MURDER.

Lingo Held by the Coroner's Jury for the Crime.

CAMDEN, N.J., Oct. 9.—Coroner Stanton and a jury at 1 o'clock this morning began inquest into the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller. The first witness was John Miller, the husband of the murdered woman, who told how she had left home the Thursday morning previous to the finding of her body to go to Moorestown to make a call. In a sorrowful, almost inaudible way he told of her failure to return home in the evening or the next day and of his anxiety as to her whereabouts. Three times Thursday he went to Merchantville station to meet his wife and on Friday morning he sent his man to the station to meet her. The man returned without her and with the information that she had reached the station the previous afternoon and alighted, going to Merchantville. Then he told of his search for her, of his wild alarm when he learned that she had been seen going into the "Bush lot." He then informed the constables, and the search was begun which resulted in the finding of the mutilated body. Miller swore that Frank cows for him that morning and promised to come back, but did not do so. He also prom-ised to return on Friday, but failed to turn up. Jas. Brown, a colored farm hand, and John K. Dulladway told of the finding of the body in rible wounds received by Mrs. Miller.

The post mortem examination had shown that the unfortunate woman had been out-raged and that her throat had been cut. The Du Hadway children testified to having seen Mrs. Miller enter the woods in going to ward her home. They also saw a colored man enter the woods, and identified Lingo as the David Wilder, an insurance agent, also iden-tified Lingo as the man he had seen in the woods the afternoon of the murder.

After the examination of several other witnesses, whose knowledge in connection with the murder has been fully published hereto-fore, the jury retired and, after twenty-five minutes deliberation, returned a verdict de-claring that "Miss Annie Miller's death was wilful murder, done with some sharp instrument, and, according to the evidence submitted, we hold Francis Lingo responsible for the
